1. SITUATION

Who are we? What has happened?

The area of Deniland has consistently been the sport of many different factions for the last couple of decades.

After a particularly bloody episode of the lasting civil war, NATO intervened with an official mandate by the UN. NATO and allied forces succeeded in pushing back the Russian-backed OPFOR into the far North of the Deniland region. Following this, UN Peacekeepers launched a mission to support the fragile peace enforced by us.

This has been the Status Quo for the last five years, with UN still attempting to stabilize the region and bring the smouldering conflict to a halt. NATO have largely retreated from the area, leaving the many military installations that were constructed over time in the hands of local forces.

Only the South Airfield and a radar-based AA Installation in Markovci Base have remained directly in the hands of NATO.

Local forces are not well-trained, many of the outposts and checkpoints are severely understaffed. Because of this, a lot of the old installations and bases have been given up and left to decay.

Then, a week ago, military intelligence was recovered, which implied a possible attack by resurgent rebel forces against allied forces. Days later, this implication became reality, when two well-armed convoys were seen, moving toward Markovci Base and the current HQ of the UN Peacekeeping Mission.
